

Join us for a Client Education Open House at Meridian Veterinary Hospital!!!

Do you ever wonder why you give your dog heart worm preventative once a month? Do you know how heartworm disease is transmitted? Do you know which diseases can be passed from animals to humans? Do you know what precautions you need to take if you are a pet owner and have a compromised immune system? Do you know that over 60% of puppies have round worms? Do you know you should be brushing your pet's teeth? These are all questions that are commonly asked, and questions we are happy to discuss with clients. It is important that not only your questions are answered at your vet visit but that your veterinarian is giving you quality information so you can care for your pet the best as possible and make informative decisions. You need reliable, up to date information on behavior, health, drugs, diseases, and more.

When you go to the vet, it is important to walk away feeling comfortable about the treatment your pet received and fully understand what happened during your visit. As veterinarians, we want you to be involved and educated when it comes to caring for your pet and making important decisions about their health. We not only want to treat your pet but to be there for you on an emotional and educational level. It is important that owners are involved and informed. We believe that, if we educate our clients, their pets will receive better care in their home environment because, as pet owners, you will have a better understanding of what is going on with your pet and can make more informed decisions.

When you are with your veterinarian it is important that they take time to answer all your questions, that they are honest about the prognosis, and that they listen and give you time to talk. We suggest making a list of questions and bringing it to your appointment so we can be sure to cover all of your concerns.

At Meridian Veterinary Hospital, our doctors and staff give you our full attention. We are here for you and your pet and believe in the importance of client education and the best care possible for your pet.

We would like for you to join us at our open house event September 25 from 1pm to 5pm. Please invite your friends and family to come meet our family.
